

Dr. Nelson Leung received his medical degree from Creighton University School of Medicine in Omaha, Nebraska in 1994. He completed his internship at University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics, and then finished his residency in Internal Medicine at Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota. He stayed at Mayo to complete his Nephrology fellowship and received a National Institute of Health training grant. He joined the division of Nephrology and Hypertension in 2000 and currently holds the rank of professor of Medicine. From 2009 to 2012, he served as the chair of Practice for the division of Nephrology and Hypertension. In 2010, he was recruited by the Division of Hematology and practices in Dysproteinemia group. He is the current president of the International Kidney and Monoclonal Gammopathy Research Group. He is a current member of the American Society of Nephrology, American Society of Hematology, International Society of Amyloidosis, International Myeloma Society and International Myeloma Working Group. His interests include thrombotic microangiopathy, myeloma and monoclonal gammopathy of renal significance related kidney diseases.